Biography

Peter Niall Campbell (3 January 1949 - 24 April 2022)

Peter Campbell was a mental health activist, educator, writer and poet. He self-described as a mental health system survivor and worked for more than 40 years to end the marginalisation of those subject to the powers of the mental health system. With a strong belief in collective action, he advocated for psychiatric survivor rights and change on harmful psychiatric practices such as restraint, seclusion, over-medication and detention without representation. A kind, witty, diplomatic, self-effacing and highly intelligent man, he was considered a gentle giant of the Survivor Movement.

Born in 1949 in the village of Strathtay in Perthshire to James Campbell, a doctor turned ornithologist, and Mary (née Gray), a nurse during the second world war. Peter grew up on a farm alongside his brothers, Lennox and John. He was educated at Trinity College, Glenalmond (now Glenalmond College) near Perth, and went to Jesus College, Cambridge, to study history.

In October 1967, two days after arriving at Cambridge, Peter experienced his first breakdown leading to his first admission to Royal Dundee Liff Hospital. This marked the beginning of his life-long relationship with mental health services, with frequent stays in hospitals and asylums, including several further admissions during his studies at Cambridge. During an admission in 1971 he was first subjected to Electro-Convulsive Therapy (ECT), a practice he went on to campaign against.

In 1972 he graduated from Cambridge University with a BA(Hons) and went on to study for Basic and Advanced Certificates in Pre-School Playgroup Leadership. Peter worked with pre-school and special needs children for many years in Central and North West London. He was dedicated to this work and wrote several stories for children (unpublished in his lifetime), sometimes collaborating with the illustrator Sheila Macdonald.

In 1973 Peter moved into a Richmond Fellowship Therapeutic Community house for a year, where for the first time he was introduced to alternative ways of viewing psychiatric labels. Residents were encouraged to feel that they could take control of their own lives and played active roles in the running of the community, which was intensive, including responding to residents' suicidal emergencies in the middle of the night.

In the early 1980s Peter became involved in the burgeoning survivor movement. In 1985 Peter joined Camden Mental Health Consortium, where he remained an active member until 1991. Peter continued his creative work through the yearly pantomime, which led to ‘Flight of Ideas’, a collaboration with Lorraine Millard and Barry Nonweiler for creative mental health workshops.

In the mid 1980s Peter was a member of the Multiple Image Collective that made the docu-drama ‘We’re Not Mad… We’re Angry’, where he scripted the drama sequences. ‘We’re Not Mad… We’re Angry’ aired on Channel 4 in 1986 and was likely the first TV programme devised, edited and produced by service users to be shown on national television.

In 1986, Peter co-founded Survivors Speak Out (SSO), the first network organisation for survivor/service user action groups, enabling people to work together to share information and campaign for rights and better conditions in hospitals and in the community. Peter played a leading part in SSO until 1996. For eight years he served as an officer, writing newsletters, undertaking research and advising groups. He was involved in the writing and editing of the SSO Self-Advocacy pack - the first practical guidance in the UK for service users wanting to set up their own groups.

In 1991 Peter co-founded Survivors Poetry. He was a talented performer and his poem ‘The Mental Marching Band’ became a survivor movement anthem. He self-published collections of poetry, including ‘In Two Countries’, ‘The Way It Feels’ and ‘A Breath Outward’.

During the 1990s Peter spent 8 years as a council member for Mental Health Media. He was one of the originators of Mental Health Media’s Testimony Project in 1999, to record the experiences and stories by survivors of the psychiatric hospitals from the 1930s until the 1980s. He continued this work with Dr Peter Barham, recording further interviews in 2005 as a collaborative continuation of his Testimony interview.

From 1990 Peter worked as a freelance writer and trainer, teaching front-line mental health workers, such as nurses, social workers, psychologists and care workers, about the survivor/service-user perspective, including teaching on the Richmond Fellowship Diploma in Community Mental Health. He was awarded Honorary Doctorates in Education from Anglia Ruskin University in 2010 and The Open University in 2011 in recognition of his work.

Over his life-time Peter made many written contributions to books, journals and magazines, including Openmind, the BMJ, Bulletin of Royal College of Psychiatry, Community Care, Nursing Times, Mental Health Practice, Journal of Mental Health, Breakthrough, Asylum, Hamlet Trust and Mind.

Peter was a founder member of the Survivors History Group, formed in 2005, working to make survivors' history accessible to all and celebrate the contribution that mental health service users/survivors have made and continue to make to history.

Along with documenting his own writing and work in survivor groups, Peter's archives include material from a wide range of survivor groups and research, including from the National Self-Harm Network, ÜS The All - Wales User Network, Pembrokeshire Hearing Voices Group, UK Advocacy Network (UKAN), Campaign Against Psychiatric Oppression (CAPO), Mad Pride, London Alliance for Mental Health Action (LAMHA), British Network for Alternatives to Psychiatry (BNAP), Barnet Voice for Mental Health and SIMBA (Share in Maudsley Black Action), among others.
